Now is a good time for parents and carers to feedback directly to the company, so please do take the time to give both your and your child's views to the company, by clicking on this link:

Mystery of the Trim Trail Solved

By Louise Simmons

Have you noticed a strange new object in front of the nature garden? A giant green bowl sitting on its side, as if left over from a dinosaur's dinner. Perhaps you've sat on the seat at the bottom and wondered what it was and how it got there. When you find out what it does you'll be desperate to go back and try it for yourself.

Hitherfield School is the lucky recipient of a unique scientific sculpture that has for the last year or so been a feature of the Natural History Museum's wildlife garden, where I work.

Created as a prototype for the museum's Urban Nature Project, the installation was designed to focus the sounds of nature.

An acoustic mirror focuses sound in the same way that a concave glass mirror focuses light: sound waves directed straight on to the bowl are reflected by the smooth surface, and every point on the curve sends the sound to the same point, positioned just where your ears are when you're sitting on the built-in bench. Ask someone to retreat as far as they can, staying in a line with the front surface of the mirror, and then to talk quietly. You'll hear every word as if they were whispering in your ear.

The Urban Nature Project is an ambitious project to transform the Museum's 5 acre site into a living, outdoor gallery split into two parts – the Nature Discovery Garden to the west of the historic Waterhouse building encouraging people to engage with the environment around them and learn about climate change, and the Evolution Garden to the east which tells the story of deep time over 3.2 billion years of evolution through geology, "living fossil" plants and a life size bronze Diplodocus carnegii. I won't give any more spoilers here but there are many other surprises lurking in the ancient coal forests and Jurassic Garden. You'll just have to come along from the 18th July when the gardens open to the public to experience it for yourselves.

Summer Reading Challenge 2024

As we roll into summer and the school holidays loom, our minds in libraries turn to those long joyous weeks for the children away from school. In Libraries, of course, we're still here throughout, and we'll be running The Summer Reading Challenge encouraging children to keep reading during the summer holidays, ensuring they are ready for a great start to the new term in the autumn. Children set a reading goal and collect rewards for reading anything they enjoy. Children can sign up here at their local library or online, and it's FREE to take part.

This year's Challenge is called Marvellous Makers and it's all about creativity! From dance to drawing, junk modelling to music, there's something for everyone. The Challenge starts on Saturday 6 July.

We are also looking for older teenagers interested in volunteering this summer to help with the Summer Reading Challenge for younger children. To find out more ask at your local library.
